

THE MISSION STORY

The 11th of the 21 Franciscan Missions established in California, Misión la Purisima Concepción de Maria Santísima (Mission of the Immaculate Conception of Most Holy Mary) was founded by Father Presidente Fermín de Lasuén on December 8, 1787.

During the Mission's early years, over 1,500 Chumash Indians were baptized into the Catholic Church at La Purisima, making them new citizens of Spain. Large and small adobe buildings were built, a water system developed, crops and livestock were raised, and La Purisima grew and prospered.

On December 21, 1812, however, a major earthquake destroyed many of the Mission buildings. Aftershocks and drenching rains damaged La Purisima beyond repair. The following year, the Mission community was relocated four miles to a site with a better water supply and climate, and safer access to El Camino Real, California's main travel route.

In a few years, La Purisima once again became a thriving community with approximately 800 Chumash Indian Neophytes (converts) living on Mission land. At times over 20,000 cattle and sheep roamed the hills along with hundreds of horses, mules, burros and other livestock. The padres developed shops for weaving, pottery, leatherwork and other crafts in addition to organizing the religious activities for the settlement.

1834 marked the end of the California mission era when the Mexican government took away control of the missions from the Catholic Church and gave it to civil authorities. La Purisima subsequently changed hands and uses a number of times by the end of the 19th century.

When the property was given to public ownership by Union Oil Company in 1933, the Mission was in ruins. Preservation and reconstruction of the complex began in 1934, and lasted seven years under the Civilian Conservation Corps. Buildings and grounds were painstakingly restored and furnished to appear as they had in 1820.

Today, La Purisima stands as the most extensively restored Mission in all of California with ten reconstructed buildings, furnished rooms, mission gardens, and livestock to represent life at the Mission during the 1820s. The nearly 2,000 acre historic state park is also home to 25 miles of hiking trails and a modern Visitor Center and Exhibit Hall.
